“Developing your Educational & Career Objectives in Statistics”

Abstract: Whether you are a high-school student, a college student, or a professional statistician there is value in identifying and clarifying your educational and professional objectives in statistics. Today’s talk addresses this important issue and offers some suggestions about how to begin the process of setting your statistical career objectives.

— Presentation:

Peggy Wallace, founder and CEO of Making Conversation, LLC

“Body Language and Tips for the Interview”

Peggy Wallace has impacted nearly 1,000 teens in a variety of venues, from one-on-one tutoring to coaching groups at different school such as La Jolla Country Day School, Torrey Pines HS, and also Boy & Girl Scouts Clubs. She has also coached nearly 450 scientists, post-docs and graduate students at the Burnham Institute, the La Jolla Institute for Allergy & Immunology, Salk Institute, and the Scripps Research Institute to communicate effectively with confidence and ease.
